Dear Kerry,

Email is fine, thank you. Flash drives are good for 1GB+, but it's silly to use them for 100MB. Dropbox is a secure way for people who don't necessarily trust one another (in theory, not in practice, of course) to exchange files without exchanging any personal information. It's like escrow for files. It's used by businesses, universities, and governments all around the world. It's something to think about for the future when you have time.

Thanks,

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] am not familiar with the Drop Box technology, so if you are not planning to send us a USB key, as has been your practice in the past, I will have my colleague Lorin divide up the files and send them to you tomorrow morning in a series of emails. You should have these files before noon tomorrow, to satisfy your records request.

Sincerely,

Kerry Morrison
